

This week we celebrate the love of those who are dads – and the love of those who have fathered us in our lives!

Most of us have a specific memory or two of our fathers which stand out above the rest and with my own dad it involved the PIANO. In my early years, our relationship could be contentious at times, but when he sat down at the piano, I could feel the love for me that he didn't always put in words. Like our amazing Bryan Boling, he played mostly "by ear," but he had one piece of sheet music which sat on the music rack: its title was "LINDA." Even though it was actually written by her dad for one-year-old Linda Eastman McCartney (who would later become famous herself as Paul McCartney's wife), I considered that my dad had written it just for ME. Whenever I would hear him begin to play and sing the words, I would come running from wherever I was in the house, sit down beside him on the bench and soak up the love. Truly Divine moments -- for whenever we experience love, we are experiencing God...

I searched for a "Father's Day" song to share with you all ... and found one called "Find Your Wings" which I think will touch your heart.

Wishing a HAPPY FATHER'S DAY to all fathers everywhere!

Lovingly, Linda
